Accommodations

The interior is surprisingly spacious, bright, and well ventilated.

Good handholds and the rounded teak companionway steps lead one safely below. A single full-size head/shower lie to starboard, across from the galley to port. The counter tops are Corian. A stainless-steel rail acts as both fiddle and handhold. The two-burner stove/oven is on port. There's a single but deep sink. The galley is large enough to work in conveniently but enclosed enough for safe use at sea.

The main saloon has drop table that drops to create an additional berth. Across to starboard, a bench seat can be folded up to create a central cocktail table that doubles as the navigation station. Other amenities include a flat-screen TV and even an iPod docking station.

The stateroom forward is bright, spacious, and offers good stowage spaces. The aft cabin has an athwart-ship double berth that lies in the stern to starboard.

It should be noted again that this is only a 33-foot sailboat, and yet it contains two private cabins, a full-service galley, a spacious central saloon area, a full-size head and shower, and a navigation station—while still offering easy engine access and room to spare for generous stowage of gear.
